Coping Strategies Against Information Disorder   Autumn 2024

Newsletter 3

We have successfully concluded the COSTAID Project!

We are proud to inform you that after two years of successful collaboration, the COSTAID project has achieved all set goals. COSTAID contributes a sustainable approach to comprehensively counter the adverse effects of post-truth, fake news and conspiracy myths. These processes have a high potential to negatively influence democratic processes and societal debates.

Who will benefit from the materials?

The COSTAID project targets educators, teachers, trainers and all other professionals who work with young people, e.g. youth counsellors and advisers, social workers, youth workers, but also sports trainers. They are the so-called 'first-liners' – people in direct contact with targeted individuals or vulnerable groups of population.

What are the outcomes?

The main access to all outcomes is the COSTAID Toolbox. You will find there the Guidelines providing information on fake news, false information and conspiracy myths, targeted towards so-called 'first-liners'. The Toolbox contains also a set of seven training modules and activities designed to enhance the knowledge of teachers, trainers and educators, and some 60 activities for individual or group based exercises.

How can you access this information?

All materials are available for free download from our project website. You can also download the COSTAID app from the Google Store and navigate through the contents with Alexa.
And if you have no time for reading, why don't you listen to our podcasts covering the Guidelines and the training modules?
